

THE LOW BUDGETS

On the very last day of the last DEAD MILKMEN

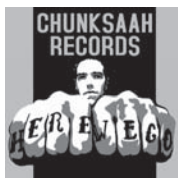

- Completed many successful North American and European tours.
- Spastic and attention grabbing live show.
- Features Joe Jack Talcum of the DEAD MILKMEN.
- Follow up to 2004's Aim Low Get High.
- Makes the keyboard punk again.

tour, Chris Peelout met milkman Joe Jack Talcum outside while a fire was being extinguished inside. A year later, Chris showed up at Joe's West Philadelphia apartment claiming to be homeless and that night they wrote their first song together, eventually forming THE LOW BUDGETS along with Steve Please and Dandrew This. "Minimal effort equals maximum pleasure" is THE LOW BUDGETS credo and this Philly four-piece are serious about being laidback. Songs about pizza menus, beer bellies, and "livin' la vida broka", Leave Us A Loan, with its DEVO meets DESCENDENTS attitude, showcases the bands urgency to shake your booty while you save your loot. Viva la value-rock!
